"A narrative delight." —The New York Times Book Review

DANIEL OKRENT

"How did it happen? How did a freedom-loving people decide to give up a private right that had been freely exercised by millions upon millions since the first European colonists arrived in the New World? How did they condemn to extinction what was, at the moment of its death, the fifth-largest industry in the nation? How did they append to their most sacred document 112 words that knew only one precedent in American history? With that single previous exception, the original Constitution and its first seventeen amendments limited the activities of government, not of citizens. Now there were two exceptions: you couldn't own slaves, and couldn't buy alcohol."

—Daniel Okrent

William Jennings Bryan

BILLY SUNDAY

1862–1935

“I will fight them till hell freezes over. Then I’ll buy a pair of skates and fight’em on the ice.”

“I have no interest in a God who does not smite.”

H. L. Mencken attributed Prohibition to “the yokel’s congenital and incurable rage against the city man—his simian rage against everyone who, as he sees it, is having a better time than he is.”
